Paragraphs of the Week

The Strand theatre in Gardiner was destroyed by fire Friday night at an estimated loss of $20,000. Snow on the nearby buildings and a rainstorm helped in confining the blaze to the one-story theatre. Fire departments from Augusta, Randolph and Farmingdale assisted the local men in fighting the flames.

Murdock A. Campbell, Vermont's Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, suggests laws to bar pedestrians from walking on the right side of the highways or "taking to the middle of the road." He believes foot travelers should wear reflectors or white jackets on night journeys, where lighting facilities are poor. He said getting such regulations passed would be difficult because legislators fear restriction of personal rights.

Colonel F. C. Harrington has ordered a reduction of WPA employees from 2,348,000 to 2,120,000 effective in April. This cut in relief workers will be followed by others. It is expected these orders will result in an enrollment of 1,500,000 by June 30, and enable the agency to operate within the $1,477,000,000 voted by Congress for the current fiscal year. Maine's enrollment will be reduced by 1,000 dismissals.

In their feud over what questions are to be included in the 1940 census, President Roosevelt accused Senator Tobey of New Hampshire of "inciting the people to violate the law." A counter-charge has been received by the President that he is using "Hitlerian tactics" in operation of government affairs.

The National Economy League asserts that the federal debt exceeds the $45,000,000,000 limit set by law. The league claims that "outside the budget" transactions are responsible and that, on Feb. 26, the "direct" debt was $42,350,000,000 with added government debt of $5,700,000,000 through issuance by Government corporations, of securities guaranteed by the Government.

Maine is the only state reporting a decrease in income tax returns, while other states showed gains of nearly 50%.

Sailing of the liner Bergenfjord from New York was halted Saturday by U. S. Customs officials. Her officers refused to carry U. S. mails on her voyage to Norway, through the war zone. An international law compels a ship to carry mail on demand of the Post-office department. While 300 passengers awaited a decision, the question was referred to the State department and Norwegian diplomats in Washington.

British sailors have arrived at New York to man the 81,000-ton Queen Mary and 35,000-ton Manhattan. These liners will be "taken out of storage" in New York harbor and used as troop ships to carry Australian army units to the war zone.

CONFUCIUS SAY—

MAN IN BARREL IS LUCKY-- TO STILL HAVE BARREL.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD TAKE A PATTERN PICTURE

The pattern effect adds interest to this puppy shot. Keep your eyes open for natural or "accidental" patterns. Or, arrange some patterns yourself — they make novel pictures.

PATTERNS make interesting pictures—and there are subjects for pattern pictures all about you. I don't mean formal, ready-made patterns, such as you find in cloth or wallpaper; but rather the pattern effects which occur through a grouping of objects, or through the action of light and shade.

For example, do you have an ornamental iron gate, or know where there is one? Then study the shadow it casts on a sunny day.
This shadow will "repeat" the outline of the gate—and if you include both gate and shadow in a picture,
you can get an interesting pattern
effect.

The same holds true of a stairway railing, a window grille, or a child's tricycle. Shoot a scene through the window grille—using a small lens opening—and you'll have a novel pattern picture. Shoot the tricycle with its shadow on the sidewalk—not at noon, but a few hours earlier or later—and there's another effect.

Place a vase of flowers or a potted

plant in the shaft of sunlight that slants through your window. Note the shadow it casts. Picture the two —and you'll find the shadow adds
"pattern interest" to the subject.
This is especially true if shadows extend toward the camera. Pointing away, they're not so effective. Naturally, when shooting toward the light, you must take care that bright direct rays do not strike the camera lens.

Often objects can be grouped for a pattern effect. Sometimes they arrange themselves—as, for example,
in the picture of the puppies above.
Here, you have an informal "wheel-spoke" arrangement, a very effective type of pattern. Note that the shadows extend toward the camera. Since the camera was pointed downward,
the lens was protected from direct light.

Try some pattern arrangements—
using flowers, dishes, books, eggs, or other handy objects. They make interesting pictures, with nice decorative quality—and they'll add variety
to your picture collection.

The question for the second debate was Resolved, That the world from the future development of machines. The affirmative speakers were Kathryn Davis and Sherman Williamson; the Negative was Holden. The judges were members

Howard Grover. This debate was won by the Negative.

A TRIBUTE

It seems fitting that we pause in the busy activities of the day to offer a brief tribute to the memory of Mrs. Sadie Mason Tuell, who entered into rest March 10, 1940.

Mrs. Tuell was born and has lived her entire long, happy, and useful life in Bethel Village.

That life, as we glance back over its many years, seems like a benison to us all.

Her Church and its different organizations meant much to her,
and her interest in them was lasting.

Only a week before her death
she was in her usual place at the Church service. She was gifted with a voice of rare sweetness and power, and for many of her earlier years she was soloist in the Congregational Church, and sang in many public entertainments.

Kind and thoughtful, no call for help ever went unheeded by her.

Hers was a beautiful character,
always graciously dignified in her manner, yet her sweet gentle smile
seemed to draw one close to her.

And all will remember, in the long years ahead, her kind greeting and outstretched hand in friendly welcome as we entered the doorway of her home. A dear worthwhile mother, making home a haven for her children, who had homes of their own in Massachusetts but came often to visit her and the son who lived with her, and for whose comfort she was ever planning.

We loved her because of her heart
so true,
For the courage she gave to me
and you,
For the smiles she had when days
were grey
And her helpful deeds along the way.
Quiet and gentle yet strong and
brave,
To each and all her best she gave.
But God has called her to "come and rest!"

And we bow to His power, for God
knows best.
She has passed away but her sweet good will
And memories of her they linger
still,
Of her helpful hands in times of stress,
Her motherly love and tenderness,
Her trust in her loved ones, her faith in God
When in sorrow's hour she kissed
the rod.
But with earth's tasks finished she
has gone to rest,
So we leave her with God, for He
knows best.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Captain Carl Norwood has been sent from his native England to the British Residency in India, along with his indispensable servant, Myles O'Leary, master of fortune.

Norwood's job is to survey the district to determine whether a valuable secret diamond mine belongs to the temple priests or to the ruler, the Maharajah of Kudur.

CHAPTER II—Norwood calls on the British Residency to pay his initial respects. On his way he catches a glimpse of two women in a palace carriage, one very young and beautiful. The other woman he knows well, the Maharajah of Kudur. O'Leary later tells him that the young woman is an American girl named Lynn Harding, who with her aunt, Mrs. Deborah Harding, is a guest at the palace.

CHAPTER III—Mrs. Harding and Lynn, her niece, are guests at the Maharajah's palace. On a visit to the palace, Mrs. Harding speaks an aside, and sends the secret to the ruler. Prince Rundhia, handsome and good-looking, comes to her rescue and takes her back to the palace where he meets Lynn.

CHAPTER IV—At a banquet that night in the palace, O'Leary, Captain Norwood, Mrs. Harding, and Lynn are present. The native doctor's wife, and becomes violently ill. She is placed in bed and arrangements are made for Lynn to move out of the quarters with her aunt and stay with the Maharajah.

CHAPTER V—That evening Prince Rundhia attempts to make love to Lynn. She is unwilling to listen to him, and at the crucial moment Norwood appears on the scene. Much to Rundhia's disgust, Norwood sends her home.

CHAPTER VI—O'Leary has located the secret entrance to the diamond mine which is being worked by the temple priests. He has a vision of the mine, where death is narrowly avoided, and a cobra is thrown in Norwood's face. Later, Norwood visits the Brahmin priests, one of whom only slips a packet of diamonds in his pocket, unknown to him. They are intended as a bribe.

CHAPTER VII—While Norwood is talking to Lynn the diamonds fall from his pocket. She notices them, and sees that he is surprised. Later, when Rundhia tries to make love to her, she means the diamonds in order to divert his mind. She realizes it was a mistake.

CHAPTER VIII

Norwood could almost physically feel those diamonds in his tunic pocket. He should have asked Lynn not to mention them. He knew that. It was too late to turn back. And besides, she was having a row with her aunt and it wouldn't be cricket to butt in. He wished he hadn't seen Lynn kiss Rundhia. There were two things that Norwood wished to do that minute. One was to punch Rundhia. The other was to go to the temple and throw those diamonds at the high priest.

But that was just the kind of thing that Norwood could be trusted not to do. He knew exactly what he should do. But the Maharajah and his court were waiting to give him an official audience. He glanced at his watch. It had remained only five minutes in order to reach the palace in time for his appointment, so he mounted his horse at the gate and rode up, driving to the front door. When he arrived exactly on the instant, the gate was open and he rode up the palace steps, expecting to get away within fifteen minutes. But time, in India, is one of lethargy's dimensions.

As a captain, Norwood was entitled to be received from the throne, so the Maharajah sat on a gilded chair at the side of the room, with officials of only second grade importance as smaller chairs to right and left. The throne remained and reigned from the instructions for the reception of British captains.

"The Highness is now engaged after the visitor's arrival. The Master responds. His Highness is to be seated to welcome him. His Highness begs him to be seated. The visitor sits. The Highness..."

He was quiet and impudently detained by the Maharajah's minister of state and four other important members of the Council.

Politely excusing his lack of time, he did his best to escape. But several switches in action levered him open the door of an anteroom.

several occasions I have deplored your conduct and have had to speak to you about it. You have recently returned from Delhi. Rumors reached me. Without revealing confidences, I may say that you were more than rumors. There are limits beyond which an heir to a throne should not trespass in quest of amusement—or for any other reason. I remind you that your cousin Jodha comes of age this week."

"Jodha is such a crock he couldn't cut up if he tried," said Rundhia. "One leg in the grave. The other's rotten. Why drag him in? He'll be dead soon."

"Failing acceptable heirs, the throne of Kudur can be escheated. I am warning you, Rundhia."

"Thanks! I have heard you. Now it's my turn and I'll warn you. It's what I came for. Who is this Captain Norwood? I notice you didn't present him at the palace. He came alone. Why? Are you keeping your hands off? Why does he carry diamonds in his tunic pocket? Why is he nervous when someone happens to see them? Is he one of your British gentlemen who never—never under any circumstances, never take a bribe? From a priest, for instance—to report, according to his honorable conscience, in the priests' favor?"

"You are talking dangerously."

"Yes. Whose danger? It would smell sweet, wouldn't it! I was riding early this morning. I saw Norwood on his way to the river—overheard him say that priests were waiting for him near the river. And I happen to know he was down by the river after midnight last night. Now he carries diamonds in his tunic pocket."

"Have you seen them?"

"No."

"Who did?"

"I am well informed about it."

"Look here, Rundhia. You don't expect me, do you, to credit an unsupported charge, based on hearsay, against an officer who has a perfectly clean record?"

"Would you prefer that I take my information elsewhere?"

"Who was your informant?"

"I refuse to tell you."

The Resident rose from his chair: "I hope the drive home won't affect you disagreeably!"

Rundhia actually started for the door. As he drew abreast, the Resident said:

"Hello, I notice your nose is bleeding. Have you been in an accident?"

"Ask Norwood!"

"You mean to tell me? Do you know where Norwood is now?"

"At the palace, in conference, perhaps fishing for a larger bribe from someone else."

"Now, now, Rundhia! Who was your informant about those diamonds?"

"I might tell you in strict confidence."

"I promise nothing. But I will believe nothing unless you tell me your informant's name."

"Between you and me, it was Miss Lynn Harding."

"How should she know?"

"She saw them. Norwood is in love with her."

"You know that?"

"Any fool could guess it. I think Norwood casually let her see them to impress her. He is mad about her. Don't quote me. It's up to you now."

The Fashion Frock Of The Week

AN EARLY SPRING MODE

as worn in Hollywood by

PATRICIA ELLIS

Star of Screen and Radio

One of the latest style innovations from Paris for spring is the now long sleeve frock as shown here for this week's fashion. And it is as practical as it is fashionable. The long sleeves afford protection from early spring chills and from the hot sun rays of mid-summer. The little Johnny collar, marble-type buttons and a trim patent leather belt complete the details. The fullness over the bosom and the flared skirt that swirls and swishes are so very flattering. Miss Ellis has hers made up in spun rayon in a rich beige shade. Talon fastener in side placket keeps the waist slim and trim. It's a frock of real smartness and suitable for afternoons or informal evenings.
